

According to KESK, the first greentech company in Iraq, the lack of adequate electricity supply is a major hindrance to productivity for 73% of small and medium-sized enterprise businesses (SMEs) in Iraq. For these businesses, ...

Installation of the PV-plant in Mam Rashan, northern Iraq (Copyright atmosfair gGmbH) Through the initiative of the non-profit organization atmosfair gGmbH, Mam Rashan is now to be provided with a 300 kWp PV-plant in combination with an energy storage solution.

As part of our Iraq Climate Dialogue series, IRIS hosted Basima Abdulrahman, the founder of Iraq's first greentech company KESK. Basima met with AUIS students and discussed prospects for green Trending:

KESK claims to be Iraq's first greentech company. It has participated in the Five One Labs Iraq Accelerator<sup>110</sup> and has reportedly raised an undisclosed pre-seed round of funding with Euphrates Iraq Fund as lead investor.<sup>111</sup> KESK has won a number of grants and awards, most notably US$100,000 from the Cartier Women's Initiative

? Introducing KESK, an Iraq based greentech company making smart solar energy solutions trustable, accessible, and profitable for businesses in Iraq. ? Who knew that the sun could also help us keep cool? ? Founded in 2017 by Basima ...

? Introducing KESK, an Iraq based greentech company making smart solar energy solutions trustable, accessible, and profitable for businesses in Iraq. ? Who knew that the sun could also help us keep cool? ? Founded in 2017 by Basima Abdulrahman, ...

According to KESK, the first greentech company in Iraq, the lack of adequate electricity supply is a major hindrance to productivity for 73% of small and medium-sized enterprise businesses (SMEs) in Iraq. For these businesses, when renewable energy solutions are purchased, a return on investment can be seen in three and a half years.

Basima Abdulrahman, a greentech entrepreneur from Iraq, is transforming her homeland with green energy solutions. As the founder of KESK, Iraq's first green energy company, Abdulrahman is spearheading a movement towards making green energy trustable, accessible and profitable, aiming to make a significant environmental impact.

Iraq-based greentech startup KESK solar has raised a six-figure seed funding round from Euphrates Venture Capital Fund. The investment will be used to expand KESK's operations in its home market and roll out the company's proprietary solar AC units.

Iraq greentech corp

Iraq-based greentech startup KESK solar has raised a six-figure seed funding round from Euphrates Venture Capital Fund. The investment will be used to expand KESK's operations in its home market and roll out the ...

Web: <https://www.phethulwazi.co.za>

